INTRODUCTION

Education revolves around the development of individuals' habits and behaviors. Consequently, it holds a vital obligation to promote equal involvement of both men and women in decision-making, bridge the enrollment disparity between genders, ensure fairness in the learning process, and deliver balanced educational outcomes and benefits to all.

Gender equity in education signifies providing men and women with equal opportunities in economic, social, cultural, and political domains. Genuine gender equity will not only advance the futures of both boys and girls but also foster a more inclusive approach, allowing girls to experience equal advantages in both public and private spheres as boys do. Beyond academics, education must also instill core human values such as empathy, respect, and responsibility, which are essential for fostering a compassionate and harmonious society. Furthermore, integrating environmental sustainability into education ensures that future generations are equipped to address pressing global challenges like climate change and resource depletion. An education system rooted in equity, values, and environmental consciousness lays the foundation for a balanced and sustainable world.

Rally on Environmental Awareness

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law organized a thought-provoking environmental rally to emphasize the importance of protecting our planet. The event focused on raising awareness about issues such as climate change, pollution, and sustainable practices, reminding participants of their shared responsibility toward preserving natural resources for future generations.

In a commendable move, the rally incorporated the principle of gender equity, encouraging equal participation of male and female students at every stage—planning, organizing, and leading the event. Speeches, banners, and performances delivered by students underscored that safeguarding the environment is a collective effort requiring the active involvement of all, regardless of gender.

By blending environmental advocacy with the ethos of gender equality, the rally not only highlighted ecological concerns but also demonstrated the importance of inclusivity in tackling global challenges, sending a powerful message of unity and shared responsibility.

International Literacy Day

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law celebrated International Literacy Day with great enthusiasm, emphasizing the transformative power of education in creating a more equitable society. The event highlighted the importance of literacy as a tool for empowerment, addressing the critical need to bridge the gender gap in education.

Students and faculty organized seminar and poster making competition promoting equal access to education for both men and women. Speakers underscored that literacy is not just about reading and writing but also about fostering social and economic inclusion. By ensuring gender equity in education, societies can achieve more balanced growth and create opportunities for all.

The celebration served as a reminder that literacy is a fundamental right and a shared responsibility, making gender equality in education essential for sustainable development. It emphasized that integrating human values and environmental education into literacy efforts is essential for achieving sustainable development and building a future where equality, empathy, and environmental harmony thrive together.

Navratri Celebration

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law celebrated Navratri with vibrant enthusiasm, blending cultural traditions with a meaningful message of gender equity. The festivities included traditional Garba and Dandiya performances, where male and female students participated equally, symbolizing unity and inclusivity.

Speakers at the event emphasized how Navratri, which celebrates the divine feminine energy, also inspires us to uphold gender equality in all aspects of life. Cultural activities, combined with thought-provoking messages, highlighted the importance of respecting and empowering both genders to create a harmonious society.

By integrating the principles of gender equity into the celebration, the event reinforced the idea that progress and cultural pride flourish when everyone, irrespective of gender, is given equal opportunities to shine.

Self Defense

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law organized a dynamic self-defense program aimed at equipping students with essential skills to ensure their safety and boost their confidence. The workshop emphasized the importance of self-defense training for both men and women, highlighting that personal safety is a universal concern, transcending gender boundaries.

Expert trainers conducted interactive sessions, demonstrating techniques to handle real-life situations effectively. The program also included discussions on creating a safer, more inclusive society where both genders are empowered to protect themselves and others.

By promoting equal participation and emphasizing the shared responsibility for safety, the workshop not only enhanced students' self-reliance but also underscored the significance of gender equity in building a secure and supportive community.

Prevention of Sexual Harassment (POSH) Seminar

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law organized an insightful seminar on the Prevention of Sexual Harassment (POSH) at the workplace, focusing on the importance of creating safe and inclusive environments for all genders. The seminar aimed to raise awareness about workplace rights, legal protections, and the shared responsibility of fostering mutual respect and dignity.

Expert speakers discussed the legal framework of the POSH Act, effective mechanisms for addressing grievances, and the critical role of both men and women in combating harassment. Interactive sessions encouraged participants to reflect on gender equity and the need for a balanced approach to workplace dynamics.

By fostering an environment of dialogue and education, the seminar reinforced the idea that gender equity is essential for building workplaces that value respect, collaboration, and safety for everyone.

Box Cricket Tournament

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law organized a spirited Box Cricket Tournament, bringing students together to celebrate sportsmanship while promoting the value of gender equity. The tournament featured mixed-gender teams, breaking conventional stereotypes and highlighting the importance of inclusivity in sports. Male and female players collaborated seamlessly, demonstrating that teamwork transcends gender boundaries.

The event aimed to create an environment where all participants felt valued and empowered, regardless of their gender. From planning and organizing to active participation, students played equal roles, setting an example of equity in action. Energetic matches, vibrant cheers, and enthusiastic teamwork made the tournament a memorable occasion, fostering unity and mutual respect among players.

During the event, speakers emphasized how sports can serve as a powerful tool for promoting gender equality by encouraging shared opportunities and dismantling biases. They highlighted that participation in activities like this not only builds confidence and physical fitness but also nurtures a culture of collaboration and fairness.

The Box Cricket Tournament went beyond being just a sporting event—it became a platform for reinforcing the message that equal opportunities in all spheres, including sports, are essential for building a progressive and inclusive society. By empowering everyone to participate and succeed, the tournament reflected the college's commitment to fostering gender equity and mutual respect.

Annual Sports

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law celebrated its Annual Sports Event with a strong emphasis on gender equity, bringing together students of all genders to showcase their athleticism, teamwork, and sportsmanship. The event featured a variety of sports activities, from track and field events to team sports, with equal opportunities for both male and female students to participate and excel.

The inclusion of mixed-gender teams and equal representation in all events underscored the college's commitment to fostering an environment where sports are not confined by gender. Competitions were designed to ensure that both men and women had equal chances to demonstrate their abilities, while promoting collaboration and mutual respect.

Throughout the event, organizers highlighted the importance of breaking gender stereotypes in sports and creating a level playing field where everyone, regardless of gender, can pursue their passions and thrive. Special sessions also emphasized the role of sports in promoting physical and mental well-being and how gender equity in athletics leads to stronger, more united communities.

The Annual Sports Event not only celebrated athletic achievements but also reinforced the college's dedication to gender equality. It served as a reminder that true success in sports and society is achieved when everyone is given equal opportunity to contribute and shine

Medical Health Camp

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law organized a comprehensive Medical Health Camp aimed at promoting overall well-being while reinforcing the importance of gender equity in healthcare access. The camp offered free medical check-ups, consultations, and health awareness sessions for both male and female students, ensuring that all had equal opportunities to benefit from the services provided.

Healthcare professionals conducted screenings for common health concerns, provided guidance on maintaining a balanced lifestyle, and addressed gender-specific health issues. The camp emphasized that good health is a universal right and should be accessible to all, regardless of gender, race, or background.

Throughout the event, discussions on mental and physical health were conducted, highlighting the need for a gender-sensitive approach to healthcare that considers the unique challenges faced by both men and women. Speakers emphasized that promoting health and well-being for all genders contributes to a more balanced and productive society.

By ensuring equal access to healthcare services and information, the Medical Health Camp reinforced the message that gender equity is essential not just in education or the workplace, but also in the fundamental right to live a healthy life. It was a powerful reminder that true progress involves ensuring well-being for everyone, regardless of gender.

Women Day Celebration

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law celebrated International Women's Day with a meaningful event dedicated to honoring the achievements and contributions of women while promoting gender equity. The celebration featured a series of empowering activities, including speeches, cultural performances, and panel discussions, highlighting the importance of recognizing women's rights, achievements, and the ongoing need for gender equality in all spheres of life.

Students and faculty members, both male and female, actively participated in organizing and leading the event, reflecting the college's commitment to inclusivity and equal representation. The celebration also focused on breaking stereotypes and challenging societal norms that limit opportunities for women, encouraging both genders to engage in conversations around gender roles, equity, and empowerment.

Keynote speakers discussed the role of education, law, and activism in advancing women's rights, while also emphasizing the importance of men's involvement in the fight for gender equality. The event concluded with a call to action, encouraging students to continue advocating for women's rights and working towards a society where everyone, regardless of gender, has equal opportunities and access to success.

The Women's Day celebration was a powerful reminder that true progress is achieved when gender equity is championed in all areas of life—whether in the workplace, education, or society at large. It was a day to reflect on the progress made and to renew the collective commitment to building a more just and equitable world for all.

Seminar on “Difficulty faced by Transgenders”

The Children Welfare Centre's College of Law hosted an enlightening seminar addressing the challenges faced by transgender individuals, with a strong emphasis on promoting gender equity and inclusivity. The seminar aimed to raise awareness about the unique difficulties transgender people face in various aspects of their lives, including social stigma, legal barriers, healthcare access, and discrimination in the workplace and education.

Guest speakers, including transgender rights activists and legal experts, shared their personal experiences and insights on how societal attitudes toward gender identity often result in marginalization and inequality. They highlighted the importance of creating inclusive spaces that respect gender diversity and uphold the rights of transgender individuals.

The seminar also included discussions on how gender equity is not just about equality between men and women, but also about recognizing and supporting the rights and dignity of transgender people. Participants explored ways to challenge stereotypes, advocate for inclusive policies, and provide support systems that promote the well-being of transgender individuals in society.

By engaging both male and female students in conversations about transgender rights, the seminar emphasized that true gender equity encompasses all identities, and that a fair and just society can only be built when everyone, regardless of gender identity, is treated with respect and dignity. It was a call to action for all to stand in solidarity with transgender individuals, advocating for their rights and creating a more inclusive, supportive community for all.
